D1 · COMPETITIVE ANALYSIS

Nine brands. One empty corner.

Web search on 2026-10-13. Brand sites could not be reached directly from the build environment, so most claims rest on retailer, press or resale pages. Each cell is tagged: [brand] brand's own page, [retailer] authorized or major retailer, [press] editorial, [resale] secondhand listing, [unverified] not confirmed by any source found. Map positions are NORA's judgment, not data.

POSITIONING MAP

NORA takes the quiet, cult corner.

Loud means the logo or hardware does the talking. Cult means scarcity, numbering and a following the brand does not chase.

JMM is the nearest neighbor, but its collaborations and storytelling pull it toward the center. Maison Margiela is quiet but sells broadly. Nobody else sits where NORA plans to: no exterior mark, a fixed number and one price.

POSITIONS ARE NORA'S JUDGMENT, NOT MEASURED DATA.

THREE OPENINGS NORA CAN OWN

01 The number lives on the frame.

The sources found put JMM's serial number on the certificate, with a model code inside the temple. NORA engraves the edition number by hand into the frame itself. Show the engraving, not the card.

02 One price. One origin. One number.

Competitors span hundreds of dollars across models and are made in several countries. $1,111, 100% Sabae and 333 are three fixed facts that need no adjectives. Repeat them, and say nothing else.

03 Nothing on the outside.

Tom Ford's T-hinge and Chrome Hearts' hardware make the exterior the logo. NORA's exterior stays blank. The mark is found only by the owner, inside the temple.

THREE TRAPS TO AVOID

01 Becoming a smaller JMM.

Japan-made, limited and numbered is JMM's language too. If NORA copies its collaborations, editorial tone or packaging, it reads as a follower. Differentiate with fixed numbers, one price and silence.

02 Drop culture.

Countdowns, "only X left" and hype collaborations are the opposite of incidentally cool. The waitlist is a door, not a timer.

03 Logo creep.

Every extra mark on the case, cloth, box and frame dilutes the interior stamp. One mark per object, and the frame's exterior never carries one.
